

Lucky's Tail

June 2024

Greetings wonderful sponsor! It's me, your Lucky puppy and I have a tail I wasn't expecting to tell... I'm sorry to report that my luck has ended along with my training journey. Sigh. I won't ever get to be a Service Dog.

I had gotten exciting news not too long ago, that I had made it into Advanced Training. I was soooo excited to start puppy university and made the move to Edmonton to begin. The Instructors were happy with my skills but say I still have a tendency to make poor choices when at home and not working. I prefer to call them "fun" choices and not "poor" choices. What most would consider "regular pup behaviours" around the house just don't cut it as a Service Dog though. The Instructors were also not impressed with my demand barking, but I could never figure out another way to ask my questions. Oh bother!

The silver lining (and luck) to my story is that I can be a regular pet now and go on all kinds of sniffy walks, which is one of my favourite things to do, all the time! At my forever home I can relax or play to my heart's content!

I will miss writing to you, however. It's difficult to think that along with my training career, my writing career is ending. With all the playing, sniffy walks & relaxing I just won't have time. I'm going to miss your support, but I want to say THANK YOU for always being there for me!

I will pass my pen to my brother Archie. He also likes to write and said he'd be happy to regale you with his adventures! I have included his last letter and photo for you. I hope you enjoy his tail and thank you for making mine so memorable!

Forever your pup of fortune,

Lucky
